

Well, Berlin, you were amazing! My first SuperHalf and it was brilliant from start to finish.

The communication beforehand was excellent and we knew exactly when and where to collect our number from.

The Expo at Templehof was busy but well organised and we were able to collect our bible number with ease and purchase a finisher t-shirt.

On race day, the half marathon app was really helpful and the event village was easy to find and had lots of signs to help find bag drop and start areas.

However...I will never complain about UK portaloos again! Ours are luxury in comparison to the ones in the village which consisted of a massive hole with no toilet seat! You could see everyone's bodily fluids!

It was my first time racing in such a huge race and the atmosphere at the start was electric. I've never run with so many people. We were able to overtake other runners and keep to pace.

Halfway, I felt good and we pushed a bit more meaning I finished with 10 minute PB!

Water stations were well placed and I thoroughly enjoyed myself. The Maurten gel station was another story. Imagine a 90s club carpet! Feet were sticking to the road!

We finished running through the Brandenburg Gate which was fantastic!

A very memorable race.
